

BOY LURED AWAY BY FRENCHMEN.

"Runaway Reggie" Berkeley Tells Strange Tale of His Kidnapping and Imprisonment in House He Cannot Locate.

OTHER LAD CAPTIVE, TOO.

English Child Says Foreigners Took Away His Clothes, Saying They Would Not Do to Wear While Cleaning the Streets of Paris.

Reginald Berkeley is in evidence again. This time he says he was lured away by two Frenchmen and held as a prisoner in a house, which he cannot now locate.

Berkeley is the eight-year-old boy who ran away from his home, at No. 463 Central Park West, on Oct. 13 and was found next morning sleeping on the door mat in the vestibule of his home.

This time he was found at Fifty-ninth street and Eighth avenue by Policeman John Curry. The policeman says that he was standing on the corner when the lad rushed up to him and exclaimed:

"Save me, sir! Please take me home."

Recognized the Boy.

A description of young Berkeley had been given to the policeman by the boy's mother, and from it he recognized the wanderer. He asked a few questions and heard so strange a story that he sent at once for his superior officer and took the boy to his mother's home.

Young Berkeley to-day told his story. He said:

"When I left home on the 14th I sold my gold cuff-buttons to a boy for 25 cents. They cost 21 shillings in England. I walked up the street to buy some candy, and while standing on the corner eating it two men offered to buy me some cocoa. I went with them, and while we were drinking the older of the men, who was called Andre and who was about fifty-eight, said they would take me home with them. He said they had a roulette wheel there and a lot of other things of that kind, and after we had seen them we would go for a boat ride in Central Park.

"I went with the men to a house—where, I do not know—but there was a roulette wheel there. We found another boy about sixteen, who looked like a bootblack, tied to a bed-post. The house was beautifully furnished. There were green carpets and pictures on the wall, but there were a lot of packing boxes standing about, as if the men were getting ready to move.

"When night came the men came into my room, where they had tied me to a bed-post. One of them said that the gray English suit I had on would not do to wipe the streets with in Paris, and that they would get me another the next day. This they did. It was a brown suit, but I didn't like it as well as my old one.

Tried to Smother Him.

"The next day when I awoke I could see a big green lawn out of the rear window and later I found that the house faced on a big avenue. That is all I know about it. The men let me alone for several days, and finally one night while I was asleep one of them came into the room and putting a pillowcase over my head, nearly smothered me. "Every day the other boy would be brought in, but I wasn't allowed to speak to him. Then a well-dressed woman, wearing diamonds, came to the house. The men called her Louise and she seemed very friendly with the younger man.

"Thursday night I was in the dining-room with the older man, who drank a lot of whiskey out of a bottle and lay down on a sofa and went to sleep. Then I took the keys out of his pocket, opened the door and ran, with my shoes in my hand. Just as I went out the younger man heard me and tried to stop me, but I got away. Finally I went up to a policeman and told him who I was. He brought me home after taking me to the station.

Mrs. Berkeley is said to be the widow of a wealthy Englishman. She made a pet of the boy and it is said by the neighbors that he has been spoiled.

SAID HUSBAND WAS DEAD.

Weberfelds Girl Refused, However, to Go Into Particulars.

Eugenie Bashford, a chorus girl at Weber & Fields's Music Hall, has obtained a leave of absence to go to Cincinnati, where she declared her husband had committed suicide. She was greatly agitated and refused to go into particulars.

Miss Bashford was married June 7, 1890, to Harold Tonkin, son of a steel magnate of Oswego, N. Y. The young man's parents tried to prevent the marriage from living with his wife, and in 1891, it is alleged, they separated them. Last January young Tonkin brought a suit in Nevada for divorce on the grounds of cruelty, but before it was argued the couple became reconciled. A despatch to The World from Cincinnati stated that no one had committed suicide in that city yesterday.

SUICIDE IN ROOM 13.

Dave Expressed Pleasure When Assigned to the Apartment.

W. C. Dave, a maker of fountain pens, at No. 4 Delancey street, killed himself in a Jersey City hotel last night after being assigned to Room 13. His body was found this afternoon. By his side were two empty bottles. One of them had contained chloroform and the other laudanum.

The man went into the Pennsylvania Hotel, Green and Montgomery streets, at 10 o'clock and registered. The clerk handed him the key to Room 13. "Good, that's good," remarked Dave, smiling, and he went on upstairs. When he did not come down by noon his room was forcibly entered. Two pencils were found in his pocket and papers giving his address as No. 30 Bowery.

APPLAUSE SCARCE FOR HENGLER SISTERS; THEY CUT ENGAGEMENT WITH MRS. OSBORN.

"MERCY, NO; IT WASN'T ENVY."

Hengler Sisters Use Fine Scorn in Denial of Mrs. Osborn's Charge that They Were Jealous of Miss Ring.

BUT MRS. OSBORN SAYS YES.

Sniffs of contempt from the tilted noses of the Hengler sisters met Mrs. Osborn's charge to-day that they resented from her company because of jealousy of Miss Ring.

"Who is she to be jealous of?" demanded Flora.

"Yes, she anybody?" echoed May. "She is simply being or trying to be made."

"And we are already made," responded Flora. "We resigned," she exclaimed, "because we didn't want to be identified with a piece and a company which has become a public guy."

"Yes, it has been openly gazed by the audiences for the past two nights," declared May.

The dancers went on to say that Mrs. Osborn's assertion that they were jealous of Miss Ring was too silly for them to notice.

"Why," exclaimed Flora, "we do not consider Miss Ring in the light of a competitor."

"No," added May. "She never did anything to win a reputation, and she isn't doing anything now that we would want to do."

"Then why did you leave the company?" was asked.

"Simply because we did not want to play in a company of nobodies," answered Flora. "We signed our contract on the representation that Jimmy Powers was to be leading comedian and that the company would include a number of well-known performers."

Mrs. Hengler went on to say that she had made no professional arrangements for her daughters for the remainder of the season.

Mrs. Osborn insists that the Hengler sisters left her company for no other reason than a consuming jealousy of Miss Ring.

"They are furious because Miss Ring makes a hit every time she opens her mouth and because they failed to get hardly any applause. I paid them a big salary, more than they earned, and I am not sorry they are gone. Mrs. Osborn explained that the Hengler sisters' places in "Tommy K." would be taken by Claudine Sharp and a Miss Stone.

This afternoon, however, Mrs. Osborn said she would go to see Bonnie Magin, who will leave the Weber & Fields company, and offer Miss Magin a place in her company.

"I am willing," said Mrs. Osborn, "to give Miss Magin the chance that she is looking for, and will let her do something besides dancing if she will become a member of my company."

Frederick McKay, press representative for Mrs. Osborn, states that the reason the Hengler sisters left the company was because he and Freddie Gebhard sat down in front and applauded Miss Ring.

McKay says that because of this the Misses Hengler referred to Mr. Gebhard and said that they would not dance with him. The controversy was carried behind the scenes, with the final result that the resignation of the two dancers was tendered and promptly accepted.

$10,000 FOR BROKEN HIP.

Brooklyn Woman Secures Verdict Against Manhattan Railway.

Because of injuries received by the sudden starting of a Third avenue trolley-car, verdict for $10,000 damages was awarded to Miss Caroline B. Hudler, of No. 32 East Fifth street, Windsor Terrace, Brooklyn, by a jury before Justice Nash in the Brooklyn Supreme Court to-day.

Miss Hudler was thrown from the car platform at Seventeenth street and this morning on June 14, 1901, her left hip was fractured. She sued for $25,000 damages.

"I'LL GO A-FISHING," SAID CARELESS BOY.

Little Andrew Leonard, Missing for a Day, Turns Up at Rye Beach.

Andrew Leonard, the twelve-year-old son of W. H. Leonard, President of the Continental Hygeia Ice Company, No. 189 East Ninety-third street, who mysteriously disappeared yesterday, was found to-day at the Rye Beach Hotel, which is owned by his father and is located in Connecticut, thirty-five miles up the Sound. He wanted to go fishing, and went without the formality of telling his father or changing his best clothes.

The boy lived with his uncle, William C. Porter, No. 72 Park avenue. Yesterday afternoon he went to the matinee at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, and when he didn't come home his father and uncle notified the police.

It was after all his friends had been communicated with and every place in the city had been searched in vain, that Mr. Porter got the Rye Beach Hotel on the long distance telephone.

"Have you seen Andrew?" he asked the manager.

"Why, yes," was the reply, "he's out fishing now."

Andrew was called away from his fishing—a thing he didn't like—and explained that he never thought of sending word to his father. He decided he wanted to fish and, leaving his friend after the matinee, he took a train for the country.

The boy spends the summers with relatives in Danbury, Conn., and he came back the city to enter school only a few days ago. It is thought that he revolted at the idea of months of study and determined to have one more good fish before starting his winter work.

His father and uncle forgot their night of anxiety after hearing from the manager of the hotel. They both laughed at the boy's thoughtlessness. He will be welcomed home this afternoon.

RELIGION CRAZED SHE HUNG IN AIR.

Mrs. Monlow Swung Thirty Feet from the Ground from the Girder of a High Bridge in Brooklyn.

FOUGHT HER RESCUERS.

Escaped from the House While Her Nurse Sought Rest and Was Removed from Perilous Position by Policemen and Several Men.

Policeman McLaughlin was started this morning to see a woman clinging to one of the steel piers for the new bridge at the foot of Wythe avenue, Williamsburg.

She was thirty feet above the ground and hanging on with hands and feet to the lattice work. He shouted to her to come down.

"If you want me," she said, "you'll have to come up and get me."

He Grew Diplomatic.

Then the policeman tried to coax the woman down, but she still clung to the pier defiantly.

Finding that both threats and persuasion were of no avail McLaughlin sent to the Bedford avenue police station for help. Two policemen responded to the appeal and one of them climbed up the pier. He reasoned with the woman and at last she agreed to descend.

Had to Overpower Her.

The woman took violent exception to going to the police station, and it was as much as the three powerful men could do to overpower her.

At the station it was found that the woman was Mrs. Mary Monlow, wife of John Monlow, a carpenter, of No. 66 North Sixth street, Williamsburg. Her husband, who had been searching for her, said she was suffering with religious mania and during the night had escaped from the house while her sister, who was nursing her, was resting.

Mrs. Monlow was sent to the Flatbush Insane Asylum for observation.

Shot-Gun Prescriptions.

We suppose we are not revealing any trade secret when we say that many medicines are made up on the principle of the so-called "shot-gun prescriptions," which were formerly somewhat in vogue.

The idea of the shot-gun prescription was to put in a large number of different drugs, each useful for different purposes, in the hope that some of them might hit the case.

Vinol, the medicine we sell over our name and guarantee, is not a scattering "shot-gun prescription," but goes straight to the mark.

It is the best thing we know for a run-down condition, for a listless feeling, nerve troubles, for lung troubles—in fact, it is a safe, pleasant, reliable tonic and reconstructer.

It has cured so many people right here in town we offer money back if it fails to benefit.
